Few attempts have been made adequately to train men for this line of work. As the number of New York State schools carrying on vocational agriculture increased, the problem of securing trained teachers became more difficult. To assist in the solution of this problem the State College of Agriculture established the department of rural education. During the year in which the department has been in operation it has, with the assistance and cooperation of the Division of Agricultural and Industrial Education, formulated and put into operation an effective plan of teacher training. The following extracts from a paper read before the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education by Professor George A. Works, head of the department of rural education of the New York State College of...
