Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Mrs. Gertrude Atherton's treatise, in the form of a novel, on international marriages has been widely and favorably reviewed. The Saturday Review's critic prefaces his praise by recalling the crude vulgarity of Patience Sparhawk, a work which, he thinks, in no wise indicated the advent of that first-rate woman-novelist which America has long wanted. But Transplanted shows a great advance. He writes: The plot might easily have been stronger, especially in its final catastrophe; at least four or five subsidiary characters could well be spared, and Mrs. Atherton's narrative style lapses from its usual lucid correctness frequently enough to exasperate the English reader. These things, however, should count but small obstacles in the way of Mrs. Atherton's progress towards the distinction we believe to be waiting for her, and we base our belief much less on her present power to tell clearly an interesting story and to draw credible characters than on her very singular comprehension of the two widely sundered families of the Anglo-Saxon race, Claudius Clear, of the British Weekly, thinks this story should place Mrs. Atherton in the front rank of women novelists. He concludes by drawing its moral: As for the lessons, they are plain enough. If a man marries an American woman for her money, and for her money only, without respect and without love, he will suffer for it, and probably suffer more than he would if he married an English wife under similar circumstances. On the other hand, if a man marries an American woman for love, the condition of happiness is that one or the other should be willing to merge individuality. It is hard for...
